

Yellow Gold Marquise Diamond Half Eternity Band with Prong Setting: A Shape With a Royal Backstory

Most diamond shapes are named for their geometry - round, princess, cushion. The marquise is named for a person. As the story goes, King Louis XV of France commissioned a diamond cut to resemble the smile of Jeanne Antoinette Poisson, the Marquise de Pompadour. Three centuries later, that same elongated, boat-shaped silhouette is what gives the Yellow Gold Marquise Diamond Half Eternity Band with Prong Setting its unmistakable, elegant presence.

Why the Marquise Shape Looks Larger Than It Weighs

Here's a genuinely useful detail most jewelry brands never explain clearly: because marquise diamonds are cut long and narrow rather than compact, they cover more visible surface area on the finger than a round or princess diamond of the same carat weight. In practical terms, the Yellow Gold Marquise Diamond Half Eternity Band with Prong Setting can look noticeably more substantial than its carat total might suggest - a genuine advantage if you want maximum visual impact without maximum cost.

The Elongating Effect on the Finger

Jewelers have long recommended marquise-cut stones to visually lengthen and slim the finger, since the elongated points draw the eye along the length of the hand rather than across it. Set in a row, as in the Yellow Gold Marquise Diamond Half Eternity Band with Prong Setting, this effect compounds across the whole band, making it a favorite for anyone who wants their wedding band to feel graceful and elongated rather than boxy.

How the Prong Setting Protects the Points

Marquise diamonds have two sharp tips, which are the most vulnerable part of the stone to everyday knocks. The prong setting in this band is specifically positioned to cradle and reinforce those pointed tips, distributing pressure evenly so the delicate corners stay protected during daily wear - a small engineering detail that makes a real difference over years of use.

Half Eternity, Full Comfort

Because the diamonds run only partway around the band rather than the full circumference, the underside stays smooth and comfortable against the skin, which also makes the Yellow Gold Marquise Diamond Half Eternity Band with Prong Setting easier to resize down the line compared to a full eternity design.

Crafted at Our Manhattan Atelier

Every diamond is IGI-certified and lab-grown - ethically sourced and physically identical to a mined diamond - and hand-set by our master setters at 579 Fifth Avenue. Choose from 10K, 14K, or 18K yellow gold, made to order in your exact US ring size.

Style It Your Way

This band pairs beautifully with a round or oval solitaire engagement ring for contrast, or stands confidently on its own as an anniversary or promise ring. Its elegant, elongated lines suit anyone who wants a wedding band with a bit of old-world romance behind it.

The Renaissance Promise

Every order includes a Renaissance Jewel Certificate of Authenticity, a complimentary appraisal, a free insurance quote, free shipping, 30-day returns, one complimentary resize, and a lifetime warranty covering cleaning and prong inspection.

Ready to fall for a shape with real history behind it? Explore the Marquise Diamond Half Eternity Band and our full collection at Renaissance Jewel, or book a free virtual appointment to see it in person before you buy.